Jesus Feeds the Five Thousand

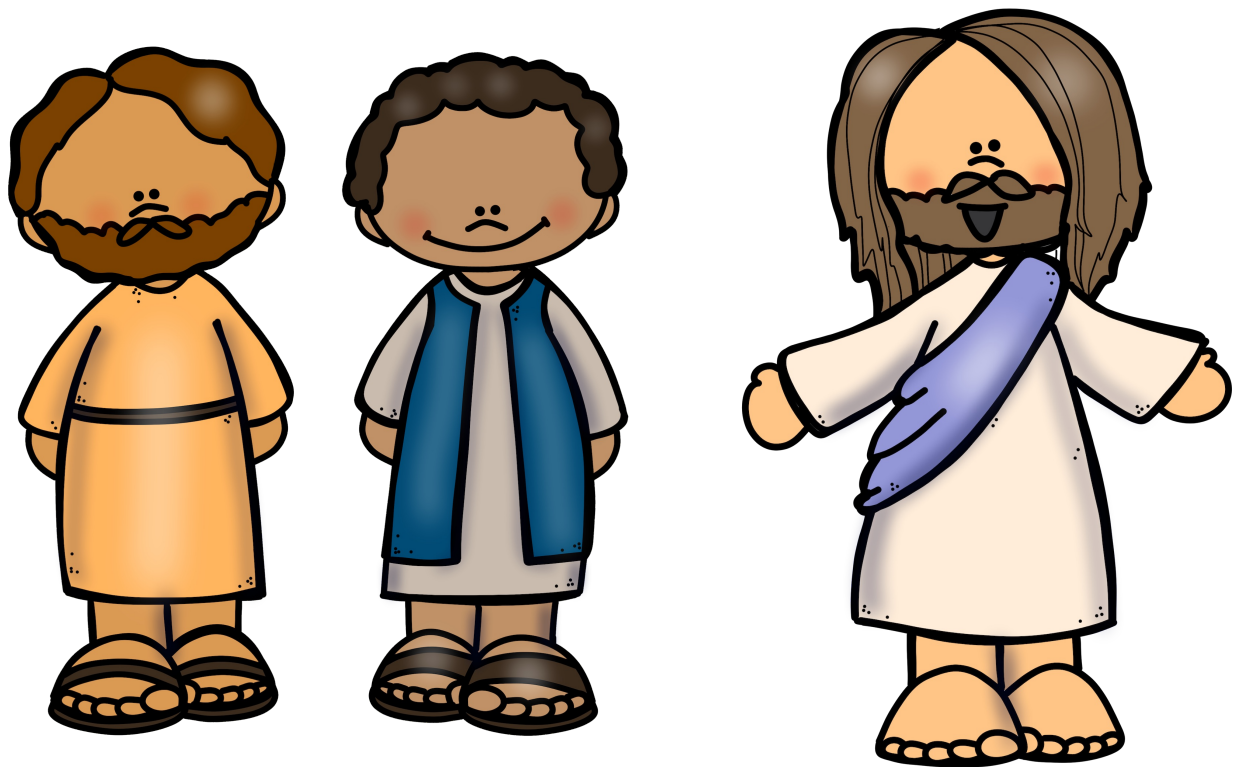

Matthew 14: 13-21

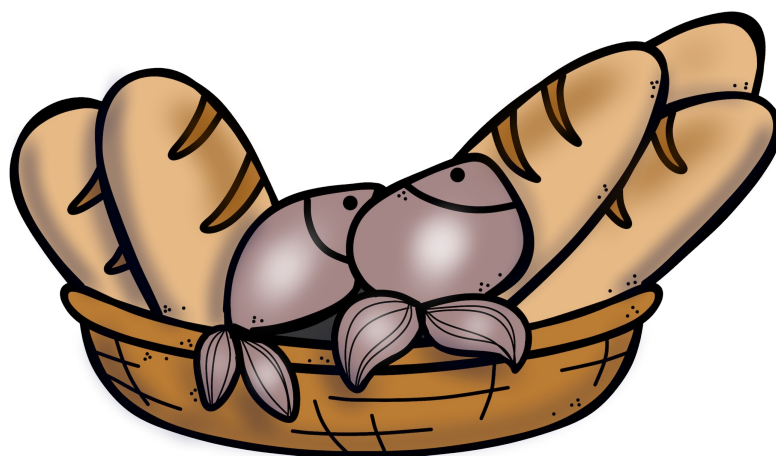

© 2025 teachingmama.org

A big crowd of people followed Jesus. They wanted to hear him teach and see him do miracles. Jesus went up on a hillside with his disciples, and the people gathered all around to listen.

As the day went on, the people became hungry. There were about five thousand men there, and even more if you counted the women and children.

Jesus asked his disciple Philip, "Where can we buy food for all these people?" Philip didn't know how they could feed so many. Then another disciple, Andrew, said, "Here is a boy with five loaves of bread and two fish. But that's not enough for everyone."

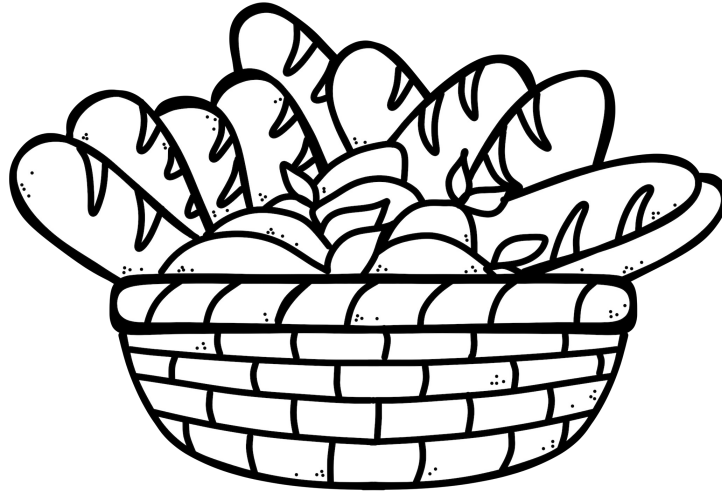

Jesus told the people to sit down on the grass. He took the bread and fish, gave thanks to God, and began to hand it out. Something amazing happened—there was enough food for everyone! The people ate until they were full.

Something amazing happened...there was enough food for everyone! The people ate until they were full. Afterward, the disciples gathered the leftovers. They filled twelve baskets with the extra food. Jesus had done a miracle. He cared for the people and showed that God can take something small and make it more than enough.
